Trends in Regulations - Federal Laws (Megan’s Law)

- Ex post facto issues raised, but law acknowledged as one to enhance public safety not and not to punish. Thus no violation.
- Megan’s law was added to the Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Act (1994) which requires convicted sex offenders to register for 10 years.

- The defendant is eligible if his/her offense is under particular sections of the Texas Penal Code.

Texas Statutes - Tex CCP, Art. 42.12, Sec. 13B

- Defendants are prohibited from entering “1,000 feet of premises where children commonly gather”. This is known as the “child safety zone”.
- Probation officer may allow defendant to enter child safety zone on “event-by-event basis”.
Texas Statutes - Proposed HB 1838

- Would amend Art. 62.03 of TEX. CODE OF CRIM. P.
- The sex offender would be required to “notify a law enforcement agency with jurisdiction over the public park of [his/her] presence”.

Texas Statutes - Proposed HB 1838

- This law would apply to persons whose “offense or conduct [ ] was committed before, on, or after the effective date of this Act.”
- No ex post facto if law found to be non-punitive.
Texas Ordinances: Work Restrictions

- The proposed Gilmer, Texas ordinance that intends to restrict where sex offenders work or participate in events is not alone in this type of restriction.
- Tenn. Code Ann. 40-39-211 prohibits certain sex offenders from accepting employment within 1,000 feet of certain areas, such as schools.

Texas Ordinances: Yard Signs

- Texas cities such as Angleton, Alvin, Brazoria, Clute, Cuero, Danbury, Freeport, Jones Creek, Lake Jackson, Manvel, Oyster Creek, Richwood, Sweeny, and West Columbia have enacted ordinances that require certain sex offenders to place a sign in their front yard announcing they are sex offenders.
Texas Ordinances: Yard Signs

The issue of requiring sex offenders to place yard signs came up as a condition of community supervision.

- Corpus Christi, 1997 – Judge Manuel Bañales ordered 15 sex offenders to place a sign reading “Danger, Registered Sex Offender Lives Here”.

Texas Ordinances: Yard Signs

- Attorney General’s Office stated that Art. 42.12 of the Texas Code of Crim. P. allows judge to place conditions that are not unreasonable.
- Attorney General’s Office reasoned that yard sign was not unconstitutional since it served rehabilitative purposes rather than being primarily punitive.

Texas ordinances: Yard Signs

Residency Restrictions

Laws restricting where sex offenders may live have been challenged and survived challenges.

Issues raised during these challenges include:
- Due Process – Procedural, Substantive
- Fundamental Rights – Right to personal choice regarding family, Right to travel, Right to live where you want
Texas Ordinances: Residency Restrictions

- Issues Continued:
  - Self Incrimination
  - Ex Post Facto
  - Cruel and Unusual Punishment

Residency Restriction

DUE PROCESS
In Doe v. Miller, Doe claimed residency restriction violated procedural due process because of lack of notice. Doe v. Miller

Lack of notice because statute not require individual determination of sex offender’s level of risk. Id.

Doctrine of Vagueness: statute must define criminal offense sufficiently for ordinary people to know what is prohibited and must not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Id.

Doe further argued violation of procedural due process because as a result of the difficulty in ascertaining the location of all prohibited areas, that information could not be relayed to sex offenders. Id.
Residency Restriction - Due Process: Procedural

- Court disagreed. Court held no procedural due process violation since due process does not require independent enforcement of every statute by each county attorney with equal zeal. Id.

- Furthermore, due process not require individual hearings to establish a fact not essential under the statute. Due process does not require hearing to establish sex offender risk level. Id.

Residency Restriction - Due Process: Substantive

- Doe also argued the residency restriction violated substantive due process. Doe v. Miller

- Court held that since no fundamental rights were violated, substantive due process was not violated. Id.
Residency Restriction

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

Residency Restriction – Right to Personal Choice Regarding Family

Residency Restriction - Right to Personal Choice Regarding Family

- Court disagreed, holding no violation of right to personal choice regarding family since Griswold defined the terms regarding “intimate relation of husband and wife”, “intrusive regulation, and “family living arrangements”. Doe v. Miller
- Court also stated residency restriction did not limit who may live together as in Moore, and, furthermore, statute not operate directly on family. Id.

Residency Restriction - Right to Travel

- Doe claimed residency restriction interfered with the right to travel. Doe v. Miller.
- The court explained the two federal guarantees the right to travel protects:
  - Protection from actual barriers &
  - Protection from being treated differently. Id.
The Court further identified 3 components of the right to travel:
- Right of citizens of states to enter and leave other states;
- Right to be treated well as a visitor when visit is not permanent;
- Right for visitor to become permanent resident, treated as other citizens of that state. Doe v. Miller.

The court held that there was no violation of the right to travel since:
- Statute not directly impair interstate movement &
- Statute not treat nonresidents differently from residents.

Doe v. Miller.
Residency Restriction - Right to Live Where you Want

- Doe claimed the residency restriction violated the right to live where you want. Doe v. Miller.
- Court disagreed, citing Prostrollo v. Univ. of S.D., 507 F.2d 775, 781 (8th Cir. 1974) where this court did not see the right to live where you want as a fundamental right. Id.

Residency Restriction - Right to Live Where You Want

- The Doe v. Miller court stated that Doe did not show the right to live where you want is “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition”. Id. (quoting Moore, 431 U.S. at 503).
- Thus, no violation of fundamental right since the right to live where you want is not a fundamental right.
Doe argued that the residency restriction violated the Self-Incrimination Clause of the Fifth Amendment. Doe v. Miller.

The court disagreed, stating “the residency restriction does not compel a sex offender to be a witness against himself....” Id. No violation.
Residency Restriction

EX POST FACTO

Residency Restriction - Ex Post Facto

- Doe argued the residency restriction violates “ex post facto law because it imposes retroactive punishment on those who committed a sex offense prior to July 1, 2002. Doe v. Miller.

- The court explained that to determine if there was a violation of ex post facto law, it must be determined whether the law makers intended to establish a civil, nonpunititive law or criminal punishment. Id.
Residency Restriction - Ex Post Facto

- This court found that the law was created to protect the health and safety of society, to be a regulatory, non-punitive law. \textit{Id.}
- The court explained that the residency restriction is not banishment since it did not prohibit sex offenders from accessing areas near schools, etc. \textit{Id.}

Residency Restriction - Ex Post Facto

- The court also stated that though the residency restriction is intended to deter (reduce sex offender’s temptation) “governmental programs might deter crime without imposing punishment.” \textit{Doe v. Miller} (citing \textit{Smith v. Doe}, 538 U.S. 84).
The court acknowledged Doe’s contention that the residency restriction was cruel and unusual punishment just to the extent to state that since they found the residency restriction was not punitive, there was no violation of the Eighth Amendment. Doe v. Miller.
The court determined that the standard of review is rational basis. Doe v. Miller.

The court earlier discussed no fundamental right had been violated. Id.
Residency Restriction – Rational Basis

- The court further found that based on expert testimony, “reducing the frequency of contact between sex offenders and children is likely to reduce temptation and opportunity, which... is important to reducing the risk of reoffense.” Doe v. Miller

Residency Restriction – Rational Basis

- The court found that the residency restriction, which would likely reduce sex offenders’ temptation to offend, was rationally related to the State’s interest in protecting the health and safety of its citizens.
  See Doe v. Miller.
Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- Laws banning certain sex offenders from entering parks have been challenged and survived.

Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- The City of Laredo is one Texas city that has adopted an ordinance that prohibits sex offenders from loitering in or around city parks solely or primarily intended for children.

ERICA CORDOVA “Parks may be off-limits to sex offenders”. Laredo Morning Times. May 18, 2005.

Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

LAREDO, TEX., CODE §23-8 (2005)
- was influenced by Doe v. Lafayette;
- based on 720 ILL. STAT. ANN. 5/11-9.4; and
- borrowed language from TEX. CODE CRIM. P. art. 42.12, Section 13B.

Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- Several constitutional challenges were made by sex offenders who challenged 720 ILL. STAT. ANN. 5/11-9.4 (prohibiting certain sex offenders from approaching, etc. children in parks) and the banning of John Doe from the City of Lafayette parks.

People v. Diestelhorst

Doe v. City of Lafayette
Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

Issues:
- Fundamental Rights
- Rational Basis Standard
- Due Process
- Right to Travel
- Ex Post Facto

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS
- No right to approach, contact or communicate with a child that is not his/her own. People v. Diestelhorst
- Sex offenders not a protected class.
Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- RATIONAL BASIS STANDARD
  - No fundamental right.
  - Law narrowly tailored and had rational relationship to State’s interest in protecting children.

  People v. Diestelhorst
  Doe v. City of Lafayette

Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- DUE PROCESS
  - For due process clause to apply, challenger must establish that the prohibition deprives him of some liberty or property interest. In the Matter of M.A.H., 20 S.W.3d 860, 864 (Tex.Ct.App. 2000)
Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

DUE PROCESS

- No liberty or property interest in approaching, contacting, or communicating with children that are not his own. See id., 864-865.

Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

RIGHT TO TRAVEL

To infringe on the right to travel, the primary objective must be to impede travel or penalize the exercise of travel. Ex parte William Matthew Robinson, 80 S.W.3d 709, 715 (Tex.Ct.App. 2002).

Laredo ordinance was intended to protect children from sex offenders, not to impede travel.
Texas Ordinances – Prohibition from Parks

- RIGHT TO TRAVEL
  - The “constitutional right to the most convenient form of travel” does not exist. Id.
  - “The right to travel is subject to reasonable regulation.” Id.

Texas Ordinances – Prohibition from Parks

- EX POST FACTO
  - Nonpunitive law intended to protect children from sex offenders.

  Doe v. Miller.

  Double Jeopardy - Since nonpunitive, not a crime, thus double jeopardy not apply.
Texas Ordinances - Prohibition from Parks

- Enforcement
  - Violation of ordinance
  - Criminal Trespass

- Community Reaction
